OF GRAVES COUNTY. The President did veto the confiscation bill, as it passed both Houses; but the majority finding out his objections, made haste to pass an amendatory act to obviate the chief objections, and the President sends in his veto and the bill signed. The supplement nullifies some of the mean features of the bill. We can't say the process is unconstitutional, but it is novel and dangerous. It gives the President a power in our Government he was not intended to have. In the better days of the Government such a process would have raised a storm of indignation. It would have been tered, together with the names of their set down as an unwarrantable interference with the privileges of Congress.

The Confeds, in order to enhance the power of the President and lead to a stronger central power, gave their President power to approve any part of a bill and disapprove the rest. The process at Washington amounts practically to the same thing. That was just what the framers of our institutions did not intend. It is a remarkable instance of extremes meeting. The country will be more inclined to overlook this, inasmuch as the President is more conservative than Congress; but the position of the two may be reversed, and the process is a dangerous innovation. It shows that the party in power is as crafty as it is fanatical; if they could not get what they wanted, they would get what they could

The Confeds, it will be remembered, not only give the President power to accept parts of a bill and reject the rest, but they give the members of his Cabinet a right to a seat on the floor of Congress, and the a complete review of the military operaright to participate in debate; and no appropriation of money can be made unless ing was decided upon, and the council it is recommended by the Cabinet, except reassembled early on the morning of July by a vote of two-thirds; all of which tends oth. The Republicans would not go on record square against their own President, but they filibustered to stave off the vote on the main question till the hour of adjournment arrived, demanding a call of the House, moving to lay the resolution to print on the table, and calling for the year and nays on every question. The whole time was thus used up, the hour fixed on having arrived, Speaker Grow declared the House adjourned sine die, and the President's message went unprint-ed. The general feeling about the affair is, that the President snubbed Congress by sending the message, and they snubbed him by their refusal to print it.

The only noticeable point in the message was the significant remark that he was quite willing to say he was willing that Generals should use negroes within their lines as laborers whenever they could make them available. The fair inference in view of the protracted discussion of this whole subject is, that the President knows we have heard that he is not willing the Generals should use them in any way except as laborers.

Mr. Wickliffe, of Kentucky, was very anxious for a resolution that all slaves coming within army lines should be regisowners, but the House refused to listen to Lexington and then come to Frankfort to him .- Cor. Cincinnati Gazette.

The irrepressibles didn't wish to break with the President. It might end their power to do evil! They offered him what indignity they could in refusing to print his message. Never mind, the country will read it, and print it, and re-read it. [From the Commonwealth, 18th.] THE MORGAN RAID .- For several days receding the last Sabbath, telegraphic and other rumors had reached here that Morgan was in full march upon the Capital and Lexington, and at the head of a force variously estimated at from fifteen hundred to three thousand men. It had been ascertained with certainty that these rebels had been at Lebanon and Glasgow, but it was doubtful whether under the mand of Jack Allen or Champ Ferguson—it being generally believed that Morgan himself had gone to Richmond to assume the command of Ashby's Legion and to act in concert with Stonewall Jackson. Rumors, however, came crowding in fast and thick, that the band had suddenly ap-peared in Danville, and then at Harrodsburg, were strengthening themselves by new levies, and would move direct upon fulfill the vow of the Knights of the Golden Circle to plant the Confederate flag on the dome of the State House. Of course all these vague and constantly shifting reports did not contribute very greatly to the tranquility of our little town But on Sunday there came the news, with Morgan was certainly at Rough and Ready in the place, although we were cheered with the prospect of assistance from Louisville, as a regiment had been telegraphed as being on the way. But then Morgan might get here before the regiment did-and what then? It was all important to check him some distance from town, and give him the best fight we could. The Court House bell was rung, the citizens flocked in, the Hon. James Harlan took the Chair, and propounded the question whether we should surrender or defend the town? The latter proposition was carried unanimously. Mr. Harlan then proposed that the whole force, whatever it might be, be placed under the mmediate command of Lieutenant-Colonel George W. Monroe, of the Twenty-second Regiment, who was casually in Frankfort on business connected with his Regiment now at Cumberland Gap. This was carried with an enthusiastic shout, and Col. Monroe accepted the charge with the assurance that he would do his best to protect his own beloved city of Frankfort. Capt. Mills was present, and summoned his company of Home Guards to repair at once to the armory, and get ready to march. There still remained some seventy or eighty citizens who were not enrolled in any regular company, but they mustered upon the public square, and there chose for their officers Robert Richardson (Superintendent of Public Instruction) for Captain, Major John B. Major for First Lieutenant, and Col. A. G. Hodges for Second Lieutenant.

The stars and stripes waving whose countenances a moment before wore an anxious look now beamed with hope and defiance, and if Morgan had arrived at that moment he would have encountered a foe that would have hurled him and his host to destruction. But as he did not make his appearance, the Frankfort soldiers took up line of march by the Lawrenceburg pike, and a short distance below the mouth and matches all lighted ready to pour in the grape upon the rebels as they came Night had come on, and the citizens were placed on the steep hill sides, unassailable by cavalry, and with the river in front. These were to act as skirmishers and protect the battery until the regiment could get up to their assistance. They occupied this precipitous cliff during the whole night. No enemy appearing, and the sun having got to some height, they were back to town. In the morning of the same day, upon a free alarm of Morgan's approach, they we marched back again to their old position, but while there, received certain intelligence that Morgan had crossed the river at a ferry some miles above, and was then in the neighborhood of Versailles. By this time the Eighty-fifth Ohio had arrived, and Frankfort was pro-nounced impregnable from any assault that ild make. The citizens then laid aside their arms and returned to their

CORINTH, June 29, 1862. For some time reports have been brought here by citizens, prisoners and deserters coming from the vicinity of Okolona, that the Commander-in-Chief of the rebel armies in the West had left that place about th middle of the present month for Richmond. The report being always coupled with the statement that the greater portion of his army had left, or was preparing to leave, for Eastern Virginia, it was not credited direct and indirect evidence of a more positive and trustworthy character showing the respective location of the four army corps and reserve that had confronted our army before this place between Guntown. Oko

By the arrival on yesterday of several released Union officers, captured at Shiloh, and held in captivity at Grenada, Jackson and Columbia, Miss., we have at last a proper explanation of the first-mentioned These officers having had good means of information, partly by having the liberties of the towns in which they were held, and partly by their intercourse with rebel officers, their accounts may well be considered trustworthy.

They state that it is the common repor and general and firm belief, both among the well-informed rebel officers and citizens they had opportunity to converse with, that Beauregard had evacuated Corinth contrary to express, explicit and peremptory orders of Jeff. Davis, whose instructions were to hold the key to Mississippi and Alabama, and, in fact, the whole Mississippi valley at all hazards; and that it was for the vio lation of his orders, by its abandonmen that he was directed to turn his command over to Bragg, and report for explanation at Richmond.

They represent further that, if what they had heard can be relied on, Beauregard's star is decidedly on the wane. Denunciations of his Gallic arrogance, dictatorial presumption, and excessive vainglorious-ness, and especially of the vast difference between what he promised to accomplish and what he has actually accomplished, are much more frequent among rebel officers than expressions of satisfaction. No regret at his transfer to the East seemed to be manifested by anybody.

Gen. Price was summoned to Richmond bofore Beauregard left. There was ill-feeling—rivalry or jealousy, whatever it are even willing to take in exchange "Lin-might be—between him and his associates coln Green Backs." GEN. MITCHEL.-Papers have reached Washington from Huntsville, making accommittee on the Conduct of the War.

The attempt to involve Gen. Buell's name in the charges against Gen. Mitchel is a flagrant injustice to the former. No man is less likely to let personal feeling interfere in the discharge of his duties as a just and honorable soldier than Gen. Buell. Besides, what is conclusive in the present case, the charges against Mitchel do not come from military sources, but are made by citizens and civilians, and cover a period long previous to Buell's advent near Mitchel's headquarters. [Correspondence of the St. Louis Republican.] CORINTH, Miss., July 11, '62. Quite a surprise occurred to us yesterday morning by the unexpected arrival of Gov. Sprague, in company with a portion of his personal staff. It was first thought that morgan's Forces Number 2,500. But upon learning that he came here by special train from Columbus, and that immediately after his arrival, at an early hour yesterday morning, he repaired to the headquarters of General Halleck, with clusion was generally arrived at that he came here on a public mission. Nor was the inference erroneous, according to authentic information communicated to me last night. He journeyed here at the request of, and intrusted with a message of the utmost importance by the authorities in The Campaign in Virginia-Occu-Washington, the character of which precluded its transmission through any other channel. I deem it imprudent to state what I know of the object of his mission. Suffice it to say, that it bears upon the necessities arising from the disaster lately experienced by the loyal cause on the Peninsula, and that, if successful, the people of the North may look for some new and startling strategical combinations at an early day.

Gevernor Sprague, immediately after finishing up his business with General Hallook, returned North yesterday afternoon. Intelligence from Central Mississippi, received here within the last forty-eight lours, confirms the previous reports of the concentration of a powerful rebel force at Vicksburg. Van Dorn's and Breckinridge's divisions, together about twenty thousand strong, have both been sent to the defense of that city. The other divisions of Bragg's army—that lately commanded by himself and General Polk—are reported to have fallen back from the vicinity of Tupello Station, on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, to the junction of the latter with the road running eastward from Vicksburg. The force that evacuated Fort Pillow, and was what these movements mean. Probably they are made to guard against a Federal demonstration to the rear by forces expect-ed to be sent down the Mississippi by Gen. Grant.

The reported appearance of Hardee's division in Northern Alabama seems to have some foundation in fact. It is now the Advertiser, dated Jackson, to-day, says believed here that it is intended for the re-enforcement of the body concentrated at Vicksburg. Chattanooga for the defense of that place. At all events, it may be considered certain rain. that General Buell will not be able to The occupy Chattanooga without overcoming the resistance of a considerable body of the enemy. CINCITNATI, July 18. A man came into Boyd's station, on the Kentucky Central railroad, this morning, says he has just come from Cynthiana; he says the city surrendered at about 5 o'clock last evening, the fighting lasting about 30 minutes; he saw Morgan and his men, and says the number is about 2,500 men, and he shook hands with Col. Morgan and talked with him; Morgan disarmed him and passed him; he says Morgan treated him with liteness and also reports that both bridges at Keller's and Kimbrough's are burned. A soldier also came into Boyd's, and says

Morgan's men fired two rounds after the surrender. Capt. Arthur's company, from Newport, are all killed or prisoners, running eastward from Vicksburg. The force that evacuated Fort Pillow, and was until lately at Grenada, is also said to have gone southward. It is difficult to perceive what these movements mean. Probably sympathizers to-day.

Mons Lehray ITALIAN. Sig Paulo Bacigalup AG Persons calling for any of the above letters will please say "advertised." JNO. J. SPEED, Postmaster. RIOTING.—There was a shameful and most deplorable riot in the Thirteenth ward last night. The houses of negroes were stoned, a number of windows being broken and doors battered. The negro church on Sixth street was stoned, and several shots were fired. We did not hear that any persons were seriously hurt, but the wonder is they were not. The city is indebted to the forbearance of the unoffending negroes, whose houses were assaulted, for the fact that the riot was not made a bloody one. It is imperatively necessary that this rioting should be stopped. If it continues any longer, there is no telling how far it may go. The negroes are the victims thus far, but if the mob spirit is permitted to gather force, it will soon proceed to assault and destroy irrespective of color or condition. The rioters atour wharf, who have been permitted to have their own way for several days, have not only driven of the negro, but the German laborers. That is exactly the way it goes.

GREENMAN & TRUE'S

Sewing Machine! WARRANTED THE BEST IN THE MARKET. Elias Howe, Jr., and S. H. Roper's Combined Patents.

The great difficulty with all other old-style Machines is too much compilaration, requiring so much constant adjustment, and such an amount of mechanical skill and ingenuity to use them to advantage, as to render them of little comparative value.

But the Sewing Machines mahufactured by Greenman & True are not liable to these objections, as any person, on even a moment's examination, will resulty discover. They will do more and better work than any other Machine ever offered to the public, making the most beautiful lock-stitch, alike on both sides. Send for an off-hand specimen of sewing upon any material you wish, and you will then see now it is done.
